We all know that daily life isn't all that glamorous. You're more likely to see our beautiful customers riding bicycles than in a private jet. So why does our work at the Pump remain essential to people's livelihoods? "That's part of our job," our very own Lead Tech, Dan, explains. "This is what we do." Dan likes to brag about the good work we've done to date. His team at the Pump has saved nearly one billion dollars for our customers over the last 5 years. They're leading the way in new applications that help our customers work smarter. "We've had a lot of successes, but we're also seeing how products are really changing the way we work," Dan says. You might have heard about the new product we just released: a unique solution that comes out of our CUSTOMER FOCUS. This is a product that we custom-design to solve a very specific problem for each of our customers. This is our solution. It's a solution that gives us insight into the specific problem our customer has that we then use to develop an innovative solution that really fits their needs. We know there are hundreds of problems customers have, so we look at them individually to understand their unique needs and challenges. It's really exciting to see how these new technologies are changing our customers' daily routines. (We've also started writing a monthly magazine about our business so you can get the behind-the-scenes stories of how we work at the Pump. Subscribe today and receive your first issue FREE.) 2. Original Equipment Manufacturers (OEM) Lead Techs are factory trained and certified to install all pumps in vehicles. Our OEMs not only sell the pumps and provide installation services but also stay involved in the process to ensure that they are set up properly. OEMs are our primary distribution channel and 82157476af
